Love Sings and Lovers Reap.
"Awakened for the servants of Spring March his triumph! Ah, make haste With what tempestuous paces they bring North back to earth! Hasten, for this is he That cast out Winter and the woes that cling
To Winter's garments, and bade April be!"

"And now that Spring is master, let us be Content and laugh—as anciently in Spring
The battle-worn Triestram laughed, when he Went again to Tintagel to bring Glad news of Arthur's victory and see Ysoud with parted lips that waver and cling."

"Anon in Britanny must Tristram cling To this or that dead memory, and be Alone, as she at Tintagel in Spring Love sought thus what lovers reap, but he Is blind, and scatters heedful seed that brings Such fruitage as blind Love lacks eyes to see."

"Love sows and lovers reap; and ye will see The loved eyes lighten, feel the loved lips cling."

Never again when in the grave ye lie Incurious of your happiness in Spring, And yet no grace of Love there whither he
That bartered life for love no love may bring."

—James Branch Cabell, in January Harper.

The Times-Dispatch society column has been, during the holidays, the favored medium of bringing Richmond authors to the notice of Richmond people. The lines above quoted are taken from a story called "The Sestina," which Mr.
Cabell has written for the January number of Harper's. The frontispiece for the magazine shows a color illustration done for the story by Mr. Howard Pyle.
The author informs his readers that his narration of an episode in the life of Albanora—that one of the four beautiful daughters of the Count of Provence, who was married to Henry III., King of England—is retold from the French of Nicolas de Caen, and in the original is the opening tale of the "Dizain of Queens." Albanora, as Mr. Cabell notes, was hated in England, where she stirred up strife between her royal spouse and his barons. The story opens at the period of Henry's imprisonment by Leicester, when Albanora has returned from France and from an unsuccessful attempt to obtain help there. Traveling across England in disguise, her escort is attacked and slain by robbers. She escapes in the darkness, and comes to Longville, the manor of Lord Brudenell, who happens, fortunately for her, to be away with Leicester. His brother, Osmond He-leigh, whom Lord Brudenell left in charge, recognizes in his fair suppliant the lovely Provencal maiden whom he had known at his father's court in sunny France, when troubadours called her "La Belle," and when he, an English poet, had loved her and written in her honor a song called "The Sestina of Spring."

"Because of allegiance," vowed in youth and forgotten in age, Heleigh, the poet and scholar, leaves his books and his peaceful home, and having procured for himself and the Queen a disguise that transform them into strolling musicians or singers, undertakes to conduct her safely to Bristol, where she wishes to go.
The adventures and perils of the six days of the journey and the after tale of Osmond Heleigh is what the story occupies itself with. The period, the fine art of the writer and illustrator, the beauty of imagination and the power of reproducing incidents and personages with great realistic force and color, belongs here, as elsewhere, to a young Richmond writer, whom his publishers regard with especial favor, thus showing their estimate of his uncommon talent."

Though youth, where you are, long will stay, But when my summer days are gone,
And my autumnal haste away "Can I be always by your side?" No; but the hours you can, you must,
Nor rise at Death's approaching stride, Nor go when dust is gone to dust.

The groom and his attendants were in A reception was given the bridal party

In Old Virginia Style.

The Charlottesville News says in regard to Christmas Day at "Rugby," that General and Mrs. Rosser entertained in the old Virginia style. The beautiful home was tastefully decorated with a profusion of "holly," with its bright berries, and other evergreens.

At dinner the first course was oyster soup. The "piece de resistance" was turkey, garnished with celery tips.

The rich, brown, juicy "possum, fresh from the gun tree, was fully appreciated by all old Virginians.

Every vegetable in season and out accompanied the above. Relishes of every variety added zest to the whole.
Delicious wine, brewed by the hostess two years ago, was served.

The blazing plum pudding, with its spray of holly, looked very attractive.
The mince pie, jelly cakes of every variety, and fruits made one recall the "old ante-bellum days."

The General looked on in his dignified manner and benign of expression, no doubt thinking "that silence is golden" on this occasion.

The guests who enjoyed this feast were Mr. Van Wyck and his daughter, from Brooklyn; Mr. Cordley, from "Glendridge"; Mrs. George C. Dickinson, from "Rouge-mont"; Mrs. Rosser's charming daugh-

PATRIOTIC SOCIETIES.

Mrs. Bonaparte Hostess.

Mrs. Charles J. Bonaparte, wife of the Secretary of the Navy, entertained the American Historical Society in her Baltimore home on Wednesday afternoon.
Her costume was of black lace over rose satin, the skirt being trimmed with lace that once belonged to Mme. Patterson-Bonaparte, and the waist having a garniture of lace which was a gift from King Jerome to Secretary Bonaparte's mother. Her diamond and pearl ornaments were also family heirlooms.

The Bonaparte mansion contains many relics of the Emperor and his family.
Of these the Baltimore Sun says:
The famous bust of Napoleon I., by Henri Frederik Iaelin, cut in marble from the plaster-cast model in Calcucutta, by Louis Capot, is there. Napoleon is shown in the uniform of a general of the French Republic. In another part of the room are the marble busts of Charles Bonaparte and Letitia Bonaparte, the father and mother of the Emperor.
These are by Canova and were presented to Mrs. Bonaparte's mother by Jerome Bonaparte during his residence at Bor-downtown, near Philadelphia. A portrait of Miss Patterson, the grandmother of Mr. Bonaparte, painted in 1825 by Massot, at Geneva, Switzerland, attracts attention. Mrs. Bonaparte also has a portrait of her by Kinson. A portrait of Empress Eugenie and a number of beautifully executed miniatures of various members of the Bonaparte family are arranged on the wall.

SANTA CLAUS OFTEN WELCOMED

Now a Frequent Visitor to Richmond, and Always Cordially Received.

PRESENTS FOR LITTLE PEOPLE

Sunday School Pupils Are Very Happy Over Gifts Received From Good Saint.

Santa Claus is nothing if not up-to-date, and yesterday he was notified by means of the long distance 'phone that his services were needed at Grace Street Presbyterian Sunday school. Mrs. Santa Claus reported that he was not at home at the North Pole, but could be reached at his station in New York. Thence he came directly to Richmond.

During the time consumed by his journey hither various appropriate songs and recitations by the little ones of the Sunday school entertained those gathered to await the coming of St. Nick. When at last he arrived he brought presents and good things for all the children, and elegant refreshments for the older people.

The Sunday school room was beautifully decorated in Christmas greenery, and a huge tree in the corner bore the boxes and bundles containing the gifts.

Mr. Rosser was master of ceremonies, and the children were all very grateful to him for the efficient way in which he managed the 'phone to call up old Santa.

Fairmount School.
The Fairmount Baptist Sunday school gave its annual Christmas entertainment Tuesday night. The house was
